We proudly feature a wide variety of Ales and Lagers. Whether bitter or sweet, sour or fruity, dark or light, it is truly our belief that there is a beer for everyone. It is our hope that this menu will act as a guide leading you to your next favorite brew. If a beer is not to your liking we will do everything possible to make sure that your next beer is something more to your taste.

Steal The Glass

Every Tuesday Night starting at 4:00 pm, you can steal the glass! A selected brewery will be featured and with the purchase of their beer you get to keep the logo glassware. This week featuring Hardywood!

Draught

The Capital Ale House is proud to feature 51 beers on tap at our main bar, 12 beers at our upper bar, 2 cask conditioned "real" ales, and an additional 12 drafts located at our outside bar as weather permits. All of our draft beers are served in traditional glassware. Enjoy!

American Strong Ales

American Strong Ales are hard to define and are similar to Belgian Strong Ale in that the style itself is made up of beers that cannot be thrown into any other category other than strong. They may be dark or amber in malt, highly hopped or super sweet. Their main defining feature is that they are high alcohol, defiant to all present styles, and 100% American in their creation.

Barley Wines & English Strong Ale

Barley Wine was originally defined as the strongest brew being created by an English brewery. Coined in the earlier 20th century to show strong beer as a potential substitute for wine in reference to strength and complexity. Now Barley Wine has become its own style, though diverse in its variety. Some are high hopped, others dark malted and sweet. ABV can range from 6%- 18%. English Strong Ales and Old Ales are hard to separate from Barley Wines in definition and history but modern versions even in the US tend to lean towards the English, less hopped, higher ABV direction

FLEMISH RED, OUDE BRUIN, SOUR ALES, & PROVISIONAL BEERS

Belgians believe that a sour beer is a thirst quenching beer. Sour ales are usually Flanders in origin located in Northern Belgium. Oud Bruins (old browns) are much the same as Flemish Red Ales. This ruby red beer is aged in wooden barrels (at least 18months) where the bacteria in the barrels sours it. Sometimes it is blended with a younger beer to cut the sourness. This style is often compared to wine in its complexity.

GOLDEN & PALE ALES

The original Belgian Golden was created by DUVEL. The light body, bright crisp flavor, and high ABV of Duvel, have become so popular that many breweries attempt to emulate it. The effect is the creation of the style itself. Breweries often have demonic names adorning the labels in homage of the great Duvel.

Saison Ales are from the southern more rural area of Wallonia in Belgium. They are also called Farmhouse Ales and were originally brewed for farm hands and laborers. Usually citrus and unfiltered. At times this style can be quite tart or, depending on the brewery, undistinguishable from blonde ale. Saison literally means season.

BELGIAN WHITE/ WHEAT ALES

The modern wit style is credited to Pierre Celis. He opened his Hoegaarden Brewery in 1966. Belgian White ales are a variation of a traditional wheat grain mixture that used coriander and orange peel. Often compared to German Hefe Weiss this beer can be served with an orange slice or lemon. White beers from French speaking areas of Belgium are known as Blanche.

Bitter

Bitter, also known as English Bitter, Traditional Bitter, or Extra Special Bitter. These ales were so named to separate them from the overwhelming amount of lagers that flooded the English beer market in the 20th century. They have a substantial amount of hoppy bitterness but are mild compared to American Pale Ales. Many have large amounts of malty sweetness and can range from Pale in color to a dark brown. Bock Beers

Bocks are heavy German lagers with high alcohol content. Bock is the German word for goat so the animals' presence is common on bottles. The name however is derived from the Northern German town of Einbeck where the original style was produced. They can range from an amber colored mai-bock to a rich and dark malted doppelbock.

- Einbecker- Mai Bock-Germany- ABV 6.5% 12oz

DOPPELBOCK

Doppelbocks though German have a completely different history from their lighter bock cousins. The style originated from the monks of Paulaner wanting to have a beer to help sustain them through fasting. The original Doppelbock was named "Savior" and is still brewed today at the commercial brewery of Paulaner. Almost all versions of this rich, high alcohol and malty beer have the suffix of "ator" attached to the name to give homage to the first, "Salvator".

WHEAT BOCKSchneider- Aventinus-Eisbock-Germany-ABV-10%- 11.2oz*Brown Ales

Brown Ales have strong, sweet malt with almost no hops (though American versions may have a hoppy bite). They range from dry to sweet, and are medium-bodied. Their color is usually deep copper or, of course, dark brown. Newer American versions of the style that have Imperial or Indian attached to the name will be higher in gravity, alcohol, and may be quite hoppy.

Since its creation in the early nineties the style has taken off as one of the most popular and anticipated American beers even emulated by breweries over seas. Lambics & Fruit Beers

LAMBIC

Lambics are a wheat beer brewed in and around Brussels, Belgium. This beer is like no other. It is naturally fermented by wild yeast found in the air nearby. As a result, true lambics can only come from Belgium. Since there are often hundreds of kinds of yeast in the air at any given time, these beers vary a great deal from batch to batch. They tend to be full-bodied. They are often aged for up to two years in wooden casks. Lambics and fruit beers are great as an aperitif or after dinner with a dessert!

Pale Ales

Also known as Burton (from where it originated in England), essentially, it is a bottled bitter. It is amber or copper in color and, naturally, somewhat bitter in taste. It should be highly hopped with low or medium malt. The main distinction between American and English style is hop content. American is usually quite hoppy.

CZECH REPUBLIC PILSNER

Real Pilsner comes from the Czech Republic in the Bohemian town of Pilsen. Pilsners are also sometimes referred to as Bohemian Beer, particularly those in the Bohemian Style Pilsner. Only pilsners from Czech Republic are supposed to use this spelling. The Czech Republic pilsners are dry, crisp and have a medium malt flavor.

Porters

Dark, full-bodied ale. Porters can range from a London style (almost reddish in color with a mildly thin body) to a Scotch Porter (that is black, dark and roasty). Porters have a diverse history, being at one time the most heavily exported beer in the world, then shortly after almost completely extinct. The famous beer writer Micheal Jackson spent his career researching the style porter. It is thought to be the origin of stouts, mild ales, and even sour Flemish reds. Porters are a mysterious brew that began as the favorite beer of the street porters of London in the 18th century, and expanded to include popularity in the Russian Imperial Court. (See also Stout)

Many beers with the word red in their names typically are so-named for the beer's color. Irish reds are simply a slightly maltier version of an English Pale Ale. However, California or American red ales are specifically known for their red color and a distinctly hoppy finish. Imperial Red Ales are another American variation that are even higher in alcohol contents and have high hop profile. (See also Amber Ale)

Scottish & Irish

SCOTCH EXPORT/ SCOTCH STYLE

This style often is called a Scotch Export. High ABV made it a beer that could make long journeys during English colonialism. McEwen's is considered the pinnacle of the style. Scottish exports are known for being rich and malty with sweet caramel and toffee notes. The style is also referred to often when analyzing the origin of many Belgian strong ales. SCOTTISH STYLE

A rejuvenation of small breweries in Scotland during the Nineties brought with it an exploration for more traditional Scottish brews. Through old found recipes and scrapings of beer vessels in Scottish tombs styles that had not seen the light of day for hundreds of years were adapted and recreated. A guit is a modern term for a beer that does not have hops. The beers below are new brews based on old styles of Scottish guits that used fruit, herbs, or spices instead of hops.

Smoked / Rauchbiers

Rauchbiers are a German style of beer mostly brewed in the Bamberg area. They use grain that has been smoked during the malting process. The result is a brew that can range from slightly smoky in flavor to overwhelmingly smoky. The US also uses smoked malts in many styles of beers. Peat smoked Scottish-style ales and smoked porters being two common American varieties.

Stouts

The origin of the style of Stout is the same as Porter. The title "stout" was an English term at one time attached to any style of beer that was a bit heavier or higher in ABV. Porters, being one of the most popular styles of 18th century England, were brewed with many variations. Lighter versions were known as mild-porters, darker heavier ones were called stout-porters. During the 20th century the term porter was dropped completely and the style was simply known as Stout. Stouts are dark beers but they can range from low alcohol and gravity to extremely high. OATMEAL, SWEET , MILK AND CREAM STOUT

Also known as nourishing stouts. These styles are English derived and really came to their popular height after World War II as healthy beer alternatives. Their reign was short lived and these styles almost entirely disappeared from the beer world. Sam Smith in conjunction with Micheal Jackson is given credit as reviving the style of Oatmeal stout in the 1970's. Oatmeal is thought to bring a smooth creamy quality to the beer. Sweet Stouts are sweeter than their Irish cousins. Many of them have lactose sugars added since yeast doesn't ferment them out. The use of lactose (milk) sugars are the reason for the addition of the "Milk" or "Cream" title to the style.

IMPERIAL STOUT

Also known as Russian Imperial Stout because of its origin as an English export item to Russia and other Baltic nations. The popular style of Porter was exported from England all over the world during the 18th century. In order to make the cold voyage north through the Baltic Sea, the beers alcohol content was increased to detour freezing. The vodka drinking Imperial Russian court of Catherine the II took an immediate shine to this strong beer and it took the name of Imperial Stout-Porter. Today the term porter has been completely dropped from the style. It is at times referred to as an export or foreign stout. (See also Baltic Porter section)

Wheat Beers

A refreshing beer made with at least 30% wheat malt. Those made with a German yeast strain tend to have hints of bananas, spice, vanilla and citrus. American yeast usually brings an easier to drink but less complex flavor profile. The Germans usually put weiss (white) or wiezen (wheat) on their beer labels. They have the same meaning when describing the style. Belgians have their own version of wheat ale that has coriander and orange peel added to the brewing process (See also Belgian White Ale)

HEFE WHEAT (Unfiltered)

Hefe or unfiltered wheat ales are by far the most popular of the wheat style. Unfiltered wheat beers can be hazy because of yeast still present in the bottle and wheat proteins. So despite the cloudy appearance, un-filtered wheat beers (Hefe Wiezen) are low carb and amazingly good for you.

Dark malted wheat beers usually have the title of Dunkle attached to the name. However their are beers in the wheat family named "ur" or "original" this refers to an older style of Weiss beer that has a dark amber malt profile. There are also wheat beers known as weizen bock or weizen-dopplebock that would also be dark malted but higher in ABV. (See also Bock/Weizen Bock)

BERLINER WEISS/ KRYSTAL WEISSE

Wheat beers are notoriously hard to filter because of the heavy amount of protein that wheat brings to a beer style. Krystal weiss is a style more popular in Austria than Germany though it is gaining popularity amongst US brewers. The beer has the appearance of a light lager but usually has the subtle spicy and fruitiness of a hefe. There is another filtered wheat beer from Germany known as Berliner Weiss. Berliner is rare but originally from Berlin. The style has lactic acid added to the beer making it very tart. Fruit syrups are also often added to this style after pouring which sweetens it up and lowers the ABV.
